Description

Sailboat configured with sloop model Pantalone Anno 1987

Mobile drift and deck deck can be lifted by hoist at mt. 1.85 equipped with awning and complete perimeter cover, fixed with velcro and metal buttons.

Movable fin chille recessed by hoist.

Bar rudder with rotating lifting blade on wooden + steel casing. Movable fin rebuilt with oriented fiberglass fabric

Rigging and haly dlying replaced in 2015

Hull brought to 0 and double anti-osmosis treatment in 2016

Stable at all paces, this small cabin is full of new ideas; simple to wing can also beach.

Pantalone is an original wheelable cab, designed by Studio Sciomachen in 1980.

Of limited freeboard, good length at the waterline, folding mast and rudder, this hull, robust even if of artisanal construction, has the entire ballast concentrated in the mobile drift that comes out on deck sliding on a case inclined by 45 degrees.

Curious is the system of cushioned compasses, which makes the deckcoat (flush-deck) completely liftable, creating a square with a height of 1.85 m, covered with a waterproof sheet.

The interiors include a small bow cabin, a square partially divided by the drift
