Description

PRODUCED BY BÉNÉTEAU from 1998 to 2003, the Oceanis 361 Clipper is a project by Jean Berret that takes up the lines of the successful Oceanis 351 of 1992. The hull, in fiberglass, has thin entries and a maximum beam set back; The rounded shape of the transom is original and reduces the wetted surface. The sail plan, with masthead rigging and two rows of quartered spreaders, includes the battened mainsail with a quick mainsail reduction circuit and a furling genoa. The cockpit is equipped with a folding table hinged to the column and a functional helmsman's seat that can be reclined if necessary, creating a step on the transom. The interiors are offered in two or three cabins, plus a bathroom with shower, kitchen, chart area and saloon.
