Description

The Solare 43 is a hull with sober lines, but strongly personal, equipped with an architecturally light superstructure, but which has important volumes. The principle that inspired this lobster line was born from an in-depth analysis of the market that provided a series of fundamental feedback to the Viareggio shipyard. The bow mascons, the walled and, consequently, the impavesate of the cockpit refer to the work boats that we cross in different areas of the North Atlantic for lobster fishing. The result is a vaguely retro design for this Solare 46 that, in addition to satisfying the aesthetic taste of those who prefer the timeless shapes of professional boats, is particularly protective of passengers
