Description

The Aquarama is a motorboat produced by the Italian pleasure boat builder Riva for over thirty years until 1996. The first model of Aquarama was launched by engineer Carlo Riva in 1962. For its performance, beauty and craftsmanship, the Aquarama is still considered a symbol of exclusivity in boating and in a survey by an English magazine its name was found to be that of the most famous boat in the world. The fame comes from both the aesthetics and the level of finish, as well as the type of construction. A mass production not to reduce costs but to be able to control the quality of the components, made to be interchangeable during overhaul.
