Description

Timeless elegance meets substance – well-kept owner's yacht without Mediterranean history

With this Fairline Squadron 68 from 2006, we present you a motor yacht that combines classic British elegance with solid build quality and remarkable condition.

This yacht does not originate from the Mediterranean, but was mainly operated in northern European waters – a decisive advantage in terms of material fatigue, UV exposure and long-term value retention.

Even at first glance, this Squadron 68 conveys what Fairline is appreciated for worldwide: timeless design, high-quality workmanship and a well thought-out space concept for discerning owners.

Condition & Care:

For a yacht of this year, the ship presents itself in a very well-maintained and above-average general condition. Continuous maintenance and responsible handling by the owners are reflected in the entire substance. Age-related signs of wear are within the absolutely acceptable and expected range, without detracting from the high-quality overall impression.

Living on board – comfort at the highest level:

The light-flooded salon convinces with its spacious design, fine woodwork and a warm, inviting atmosphere. A special highlight – especially for use in northern areas – is the integrated underfloor heating in the saloon, which ensures an exceptionally pleasant indoor climate even on cooler days.

The transitions between saloon, galley and dining area are designed to
